New PPIC Report: A New Approach to Accounting for Environmental Water: Insights from the Sacramento–San

Joaquin Delta

Nov 14, 2017 07:55 am | Maven

From the PPIC Water Center: How water is apportioned to California's cities, farms, and the environment can lead to conflict and competition in times of drought. Allocation of water to the environment in particular is poorly accounted for and poorly understood—shortcomings that can affect water policy, decision making, and public perception. This report reviews the state's long-standing methods for defining ...
